

Wow what a race at Melbourne. I am not a big fan of the track, Looks like something the INDY Car series would run one of there stupid races on. I don't like Indy car for that reason. Poorly maintained tracks and spec cars is not my idea of entertainment.

Which brings me to Melbourne something wild always goes on here like Ralph Schuacher getting airborne of the line and flying over his brother. There is a problem at Melbourne with rubbish on track like Montreal and other American tracks. I saw what looked like a plastic bag on track before the start. This makes problems for cars as they get into vents and make things get hot. As the cars are naturally cooled by air. There was a piece of Verstappens tire on track and should of been scooped up under pace car.

Sad to see Verstappen have brake issues and retire as it was not his fault. But it is good for the opposition. I got so exited after i recorded the results and got the bar chart for drivers championship. There are a lot of F1 fans who moan and wine due to lack of competition. Ferrari and McLaren are on Red Bulls tail. Aston Martin are doing well with Stroll up there. Alonso was upset as he got booted down because of how he raced Russell. Like reporter Peter Windsor says FIA are trying to sanitize sport and make drivers be gentlemen and respect each other. This is not racing. Maybe it was in the 60's but that was a different time.

Another bad weekend for Lewis and i don't know why he singed the one year deal for Mercedes. I would retire. Or take a year off and come back to Ferrari. And Jos Verstappen is talking to Toto about Max moving to Mercedes. It seems Ferrari can beat Red Bull as they had cars between the cars in qualifying. Then stupid grid drop penalty for Perez messed it up. The FIA have to ease up and let the drivers race. Track limits oh no drop x places or change a engine or gearbox. Niki Lauda in his book said this was stupid and FIA trying to manipulate sport to help other teams.

We have seen Lewis and Max relegated to the back and storm to the front, Half the grid will give them the wave around knowing they cant win the battle. The front end will hold them up because it is for points. But the fast car will always get to the front in time.
